Rhode Island offers a variety of behavioral health resources and services for people experiencing mental health and/or substance use conditions.

Healthcare professionals are encouraged to use this resource guide to refer patients and/or clients of all ages (from children to adults) to services ranging from immediate crisis management and harm reduction to treatment and recovery support services.

Additional resources are available via the Rhode Island Department of Behavioral Healthcare, Developmental Disabilities & Hospitals (BHDDH) and PreventOverdoseRI.org.

For immediate crisis services and support:

988 Suicide & Crisis Lifeline

Patients, clients, or their loved ones who are experiencing a substance use crisis, emotional distress, or thoughts of suicide can call or text 988 or chat with 988 at 988lifeline.org to connect with a trained crisis counselor for support.

BH Link Triage Center

For patients age 18 and older, call or text 988 or chat at 988lifeline.org/chat to reach BH Link.

Healthcare professionals wishing to make a referral to the BH Link Triage Center can call 401-437-4884.

The BH Link Triage Center, located at 975 Waterman Ave., East Providence, Rhode Island, is a 24/7 community-based, walk-in/drop-off facility providing services for mental health and substance use crisis assessments and assistance with treatment referrals.

Rhode Island Buprenorphine Hotline

This 24/7 hotline, 401-606-5456, connects people with moderate to severe opioid use disorder to immediate telehealth services for the initiation of buprenorphine treatment.

Safe Stations (24/7):

Providence Safe Stations

Available 24-hours a day, seven days a week. You can visit any of Providence's 12 fire stations, speak with the trained staff on duty, and immediately get connected to treatment support and services. Providence Safe Stations is free and provides a welcoming environment for when you're ready for recovery.

For patients seeking detoxification services:

Detoxification treatment centers are inpatient facilities where patients can stay for five to seven days and receive supervision for medically managed withdrawal, also commonly referred to as detoxification. This may include medication to ease the discomfort of withdrawal symptoms. Anti-craving medications and medications to treat substance use disorders (e.g., buprenorphine or methadone for opioid use disorder) may also be utilized. It is important to note that currently, Butler Hospital is the only detoxification treatment center in Rhode Island that will accept pregnant individuals.

For inpatient rehabilitation (residential services):

An inpatient rehabilitation facility is where a person goes during the early stages of recovery after completing detoxification. This means that the patient is no longer experiencing withdrawal and may be taking medications to reduce cravings and treat substance use disorders. Patients can stay for up to 28 days with others starting their recovery journey. During their stay, patients participate in intensive group therapy, individual therapy, and other activities focused on building skills and confidence to maintain recovery.

For patients in early recovery and needing support from a recovery residence:

A “recovery residence” (RR) is a broad term describing a sober, safe, and healthy living environment that promotes recovery from alcohol and/or substance misuse and associated issues. The purpose of a recovery residence is to provide a safe and healthy living environment, as well as improve one’s physical, mental, spiritual, and social wellbeing.

Recovery residences are divided into different levels of support. The levels are based on the type, as well as the intensity and duration, of support the residence offers. Services span from peer-to-peer recovery support (all recovery residences) to medical and counseling services (at recovery residences offering higher levels of support).
